

Financial Aid to Ukraine by EU members

Katlego Gababonwe^a

^aStellenbosch University, Western Cape

Abstract

This report aims to discuss the contribution of European Union member countries to Ukrainian aid by assessing whether the EU is doing enough to support Ukraine with resources in its fight against Russia.

1. Introduction

The European Union (EU) took swift action in response to the large-scale invasion of Ukraine by Russia in 2022. The EU has implemented restrictive measures that have significantly impacted Russia. Meanwhile, the EU has increased its support for Ukraine through political, humanitarian, military, and financial aid, with the goal of strengthening Ukraine's economy, society, and future reconstruction efforts. This study has found that some EU member countries are still lagging behind in terms of support, despite the pledges they made.

2. Top EU financial Contributors

The graph below shows financial contributions by EU members and only six member countries contributed more than 0.7 billion to Ukraine Aid while others contributed less.

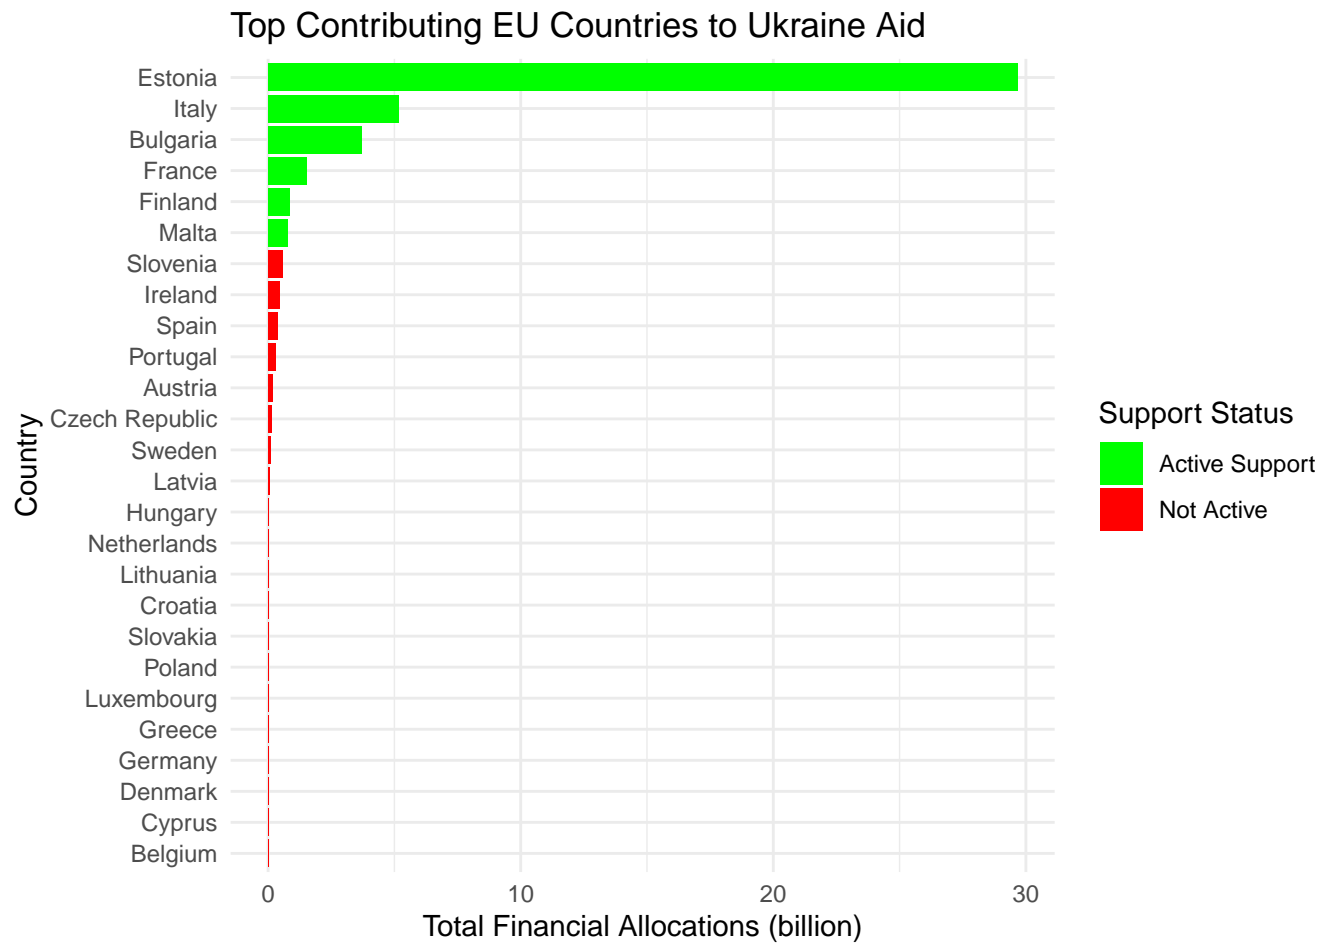

Figure 2.1: Contributing EU Countries to Ukraine Aid.

3. Contributions by EU vs Non_EU members

The table below shows the contribution of European Union members compared to non EU members. The data suggests that EU members contribute a lot that non EU members. However, the contributions of EU members are still far less compared to the commitments.

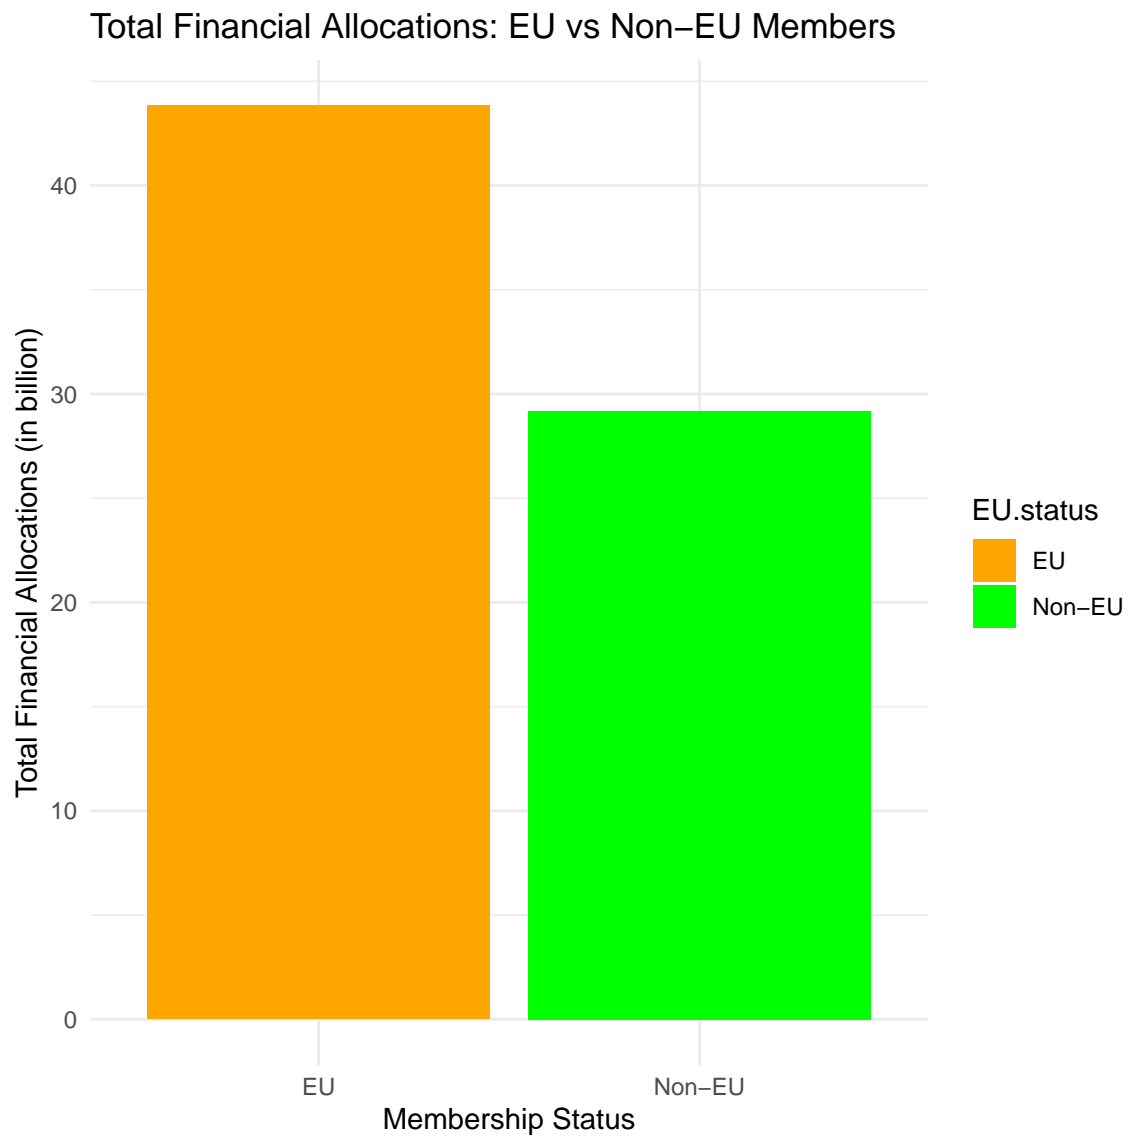

Figure 3.1: Total Financial Allocations.

4. Financial Commitments by EU members

The table below shows a horizontal bar chart of EU countries' financial commitment; the top 5 countries in the graph are not among the top contributors. This indicates that some countries are still lagging behind in actualizing their commitment. This means there is room for the EU to contribute more than they are currently doing to aid the UK.

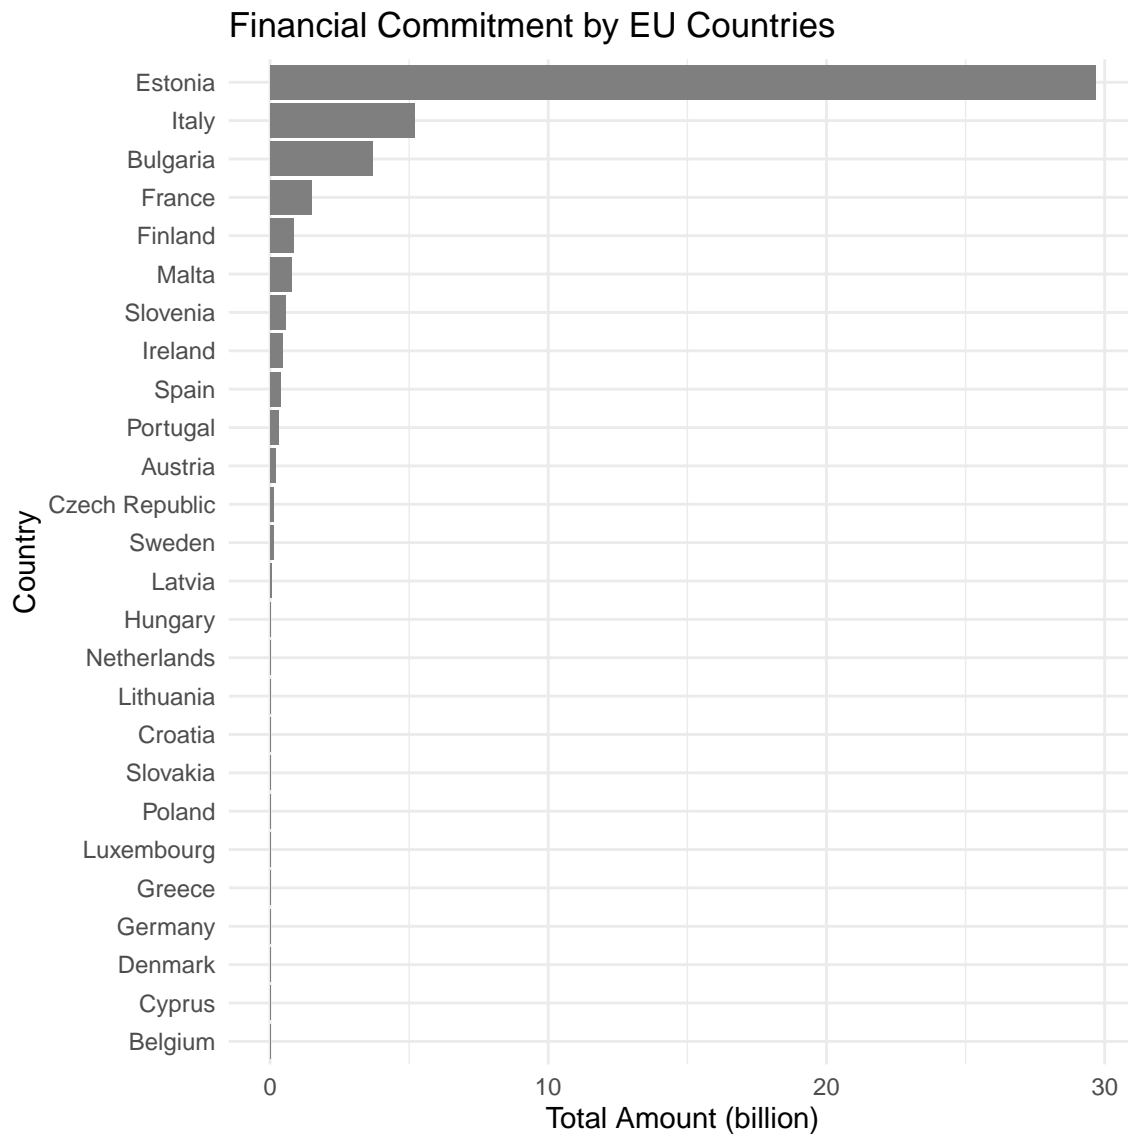

Figure 4.1: Financial Commitments.

5. Conclusion

The European Union has made commendable efforts by standing in solidarity with Ukraine in its war against Russia. Some EU countries have made progress in making contributions, while others are still lagging behind. The unity of EU countries and the fulfillment of their commitments are fundamental to Ukraine's fight against Russia.